INDIANA

BROWN COUNTY STATE PARK

Brown County State Park is the largest Indiana State Park. This nationally known 15,696 acre facility first opened to the public in 1929.

In the first few years as the park grew in popularity, several facilities were developed. Abe Martin Lodge, several cabins and a saddle barn were built, as was a swimming pool. The roads, entrances, and many trails were added and improved during this time.

On June 1, 1934, the Veteran's Civilian Conservation Corps Company 1557 began its work. The planting of black locust, black walnut, various pines and spruces gave nature a helping hand in healing extreme erosion. The CCC workers also built many of the existing buildings, shelters, picnic tables, ovens, roads, trails and the two log lookout towers. They cleared most of the vistas along the park's roadway and built Ogle Lake in 1934-35. Strahl Lake was built earlier, around 1929.

For those who would rather see the park on foot or horseback, many miles of well-marked trails are available. About 70 miles of bridle trails and over 12 miles of hiking trails lead through the steep, forested hills. The roadless southwestern and eastern parts of the park can be visited only by foot or horseback. The Ogle Hollow Nature Preserve, within the park, contains an attractive self-guiding nature trail, which describes natural aspects of the park.

Picnickers have their choice of several picnic areas — some of which have shelters equipped with fireplaces. Several have comfort stations located nearby.

The park has a nature center in which a snake exhibit, bird-watching room and other displays are housed. Naturalist services are available year-round and are headquartered in the nature center, however, reduced hours are in effect for the winter season.

The wildlife that inhabits Brown County State Park includes a variety of species adapted to life in the forest and forest edges. Some mammals such as the white-tailed deer, raccoon, gray squirrel, and various birds including robin, white-breasted nuthatch, bluejay, cardinal, junco, crow and wild turkey are seen by visitors.

Camping sites are available year-round. The campgrounds have electrical hook-ups and modern comfort stations and showers. Brown County also has a horsemen's campground located in the extreme southern part of the park. For those visitors who prefer all of the comforts of home, Abe Martin Lodge contains 84 lodge rooms (each with two beds and bathroom), as well as two large meeting rooms, and a dining room. There are also 24 sleeping cabins for rent with a total of 56 bedrooms. Twenty family cabins, completely furnished, are available year-round.

The park offers a swimming pool, shelterhouses, playground equipment, fishing on two lakes, bridle trails and a country store for picnic supplies and souvenirs.

The varied facilities of Brown County State Park make possible enjoyable outdoor experiences for people with a wide range of tastes and preferences.

Please let wild animals remain wild. Feeding deer is prohibited. Feeding of wild animals can result in harm to both animals and people. Animals that depend on handouts become a nuisance to park visitors and a danger to themselves. Please lock up all food and coolers inside cars or campers. Roll car windows up tightly.
